NORWICH UNIVERSITY

Blank forms were issued to the corps to be filled out and returned to W. A. Ellis, N. U., 97, who is compiling a record history of Norwich university under the direction of General Grenville M. Dodge, N. U., '60. By means of these blanks a complete history of every man ever connected with the university will be attained.

The "Inter-communicating Telephone system" is being installed in the buildings of the university. Instruments have been put up in Carnegie hall, Dewey hall and the heating plant. The system is so arranged that by the pressing of a button connection is made with the party desired and they may be rung up without ringing the other parties. Instruments will soon be installed in all the buildings.

Recently Lieutenant William A. Shaw local forecaster, United States weather bureau, gave a lecture in Dewey hall to the seniors and members of the corps of cadets on the atmosphere and work of the United States weather bureau. He outlined briefly the founding of the weather bureau in this country by the head of the signal corps of the army shortly after the Civil War, and its development until the present time, when about 800 men are engaged in this work at about 300 different stations throughout the country. Lieut. Shaw explained with the aid of a stereopticon the different pieces of apparatus used in determining the wind velocity, duration of sunshine, amount of rainfall, maximum and minimum temperatures and the pressure of the atmosphere. A record is compiled each day and reports sent throughout the country and forecasts of the weather for the next 24 hours are made. He also showed with his slides several stations of the weather bureau, interesting cloud formations and snow crystals. This lecture will be followed by another in the near future.

DRINK PLENTY OF GOOD WATER

Valuable Prescription Which Anyone Can Prepare

AN AUTHORITY'S ADVICE

Try This at Home For Kidney and Bladder Diseases and Rheumatism--
Get The Ingredients From any Druggist and Mix.

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected."

Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls; but get on the "water wagon." If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicine--plain common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach.

To cure rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract of Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache, or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

Good Old-Fashioned Dishes.

In the woman's Home Companion for March, Fannie Merritt Farmer gives some tried recipes for old-fashioned goodies.

For corn meal crisp, pour slowly one cupful of boiling water onto seven eighths of a cupful of granulated yellow corn meal. Stir until perfectly smooth and add two and one half tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one half teaspoonful of salt. Spread as thinly and uniformly as possible using a long broad-bladed knife on a generously buttered inverted dripping pan. Bake in moderate oven until well browned, and cut at once into three-inch squares. It is absolutely necessary that the water used in the preparation of these should be poured from a tea kettle of boiling water.

For southern spoon corn bread, pour two and one half cupfuls of freshly boiled water over to cupfuls of fine white corn meal. Cover, and let stand until cool; then add one and one half tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one and one half cupfuls of salt, the unbeaten yolks of two eggs and one and one half cupfuls of buttermilk mixed with one teaspoonful of soda. Beat thoroughly, and add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Pour into a well-buttered pudding dish, and bake in a moderate oven from forty to forty-five minutes. Serve by spoonfuls and accompany with butter.

For those who have supper at night, sally-lunn tea cakes are always popular. They last just as good for a breakfast or luncheon bread to us who have dinner at night, and there do not need to plan for supper dishes. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of salt in a bowl, and pour on one cupful of scalded milk. When lukewarm add one half yeast cake dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of lukewarm water, three well-beaten eggs and enough bread flour (once sifted) to make a stiff batter, the amount required being about two and one fourth cupfuls. Cover, and let rise until very light. Pour into buttered tin or tins, again let rise, and bake in a hot oven. This mixture may be baked in a sheet, in muffin rings or in gem pans.

TROPICAL FOOD AND DRINK.

Arms and Equipment, Too, Must Be Carefully Considered by the Prospective Sportsman.

"Tenis are a necessity to the African hunter," says C. Crayson Taylor, discussing "The Africa That Roosevelt Will See," in the March Everybody's.

"It is not only uncomfortable to sleep beneath a tree whose leaves are dripping dew upon you like rain, but it is dangerous. The commissary department may be varied as one pleases. For eggs, flour, fowls, and vegetables, the native villages can usually be relied on; on the coast and in certain parts of Uganda there is plenty of fruit; meat you can obtain yourself; but it is always well to have a good supply of canned goods--meats, tomatoes, desiccated vegetables, and so on. Plenty of sugar should be among the supplies, for it is a curious fact that in the tropics one at times becomes possessed of an inordinate craving for sweets, and sugar is not only satisfying but wholesome. And after one of the many accidents that at any moment may occur, to find your sugar supply mixed with castor oil, for instance, is one of the minor tragedies of life.

"A medicine chest is of course imperative; and a cast-iron rule of the expedition should be that the rolls of liniment bandages must never on any account be purloined for cleaning guns. There have been occasions when a bit of clean rag or cotton seemed absolutely the only thing in the world not forthcoming, and the thing most desperately needed. Brandy and champagne are necessary, but these should be classed among the medical supplies rather than as table luxuries. Drinking liquor is dangerous business in tropic Africa, and the man who indulges even moderately in alcoholic drinks will find his capacity for hard work and endurance lessened by about a third. An important part of the hunter's impedimenta is a generous supply of glass beads, brass wire, red and blue cloth, and toys, and the far-sighted man who provides himself with a load of the most vicious and discordant alarm clocks obtainable will find that he may have things very much his own way.

"As to arms--this is a question which every hunter decides for himself. Briefly, the subject of necessary armament may be summed up thus: one large calibre rifle--say, a 450 cordite express, capable of great shocking power; one of small calibre, with highly penetrative bullets; a shotgun for birds, and a brace of revolvers for camp use. The variations on this foundation may be as elaborate as one desires."

JUDGE LECTURES JURY.

Two Jurors Indiscreet in Talking With a Third Party.

Newport, March 19--A little sensation was caused in Orleans county court yesterday by the discovery that two jurors had been talking with a third party about a forest fire in Bradbury and comparing it with the fire which destroyed the sugar orchard of John J. Kilby, who is suing Dr. C. L. Erwin for damages. One little point was lacking in the evidence and but for that the case would have been broken. As it was Judge Miles gave the jury a sound lecturing and with the consent of the parties allowed the case to go on. The case will probably last until Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

THE VALUE OF RHUBARB.

Best Methods of Growing it and the Profit of the Plant.

If Mr. Burbank or some other naturalist should discover a fruit or vegetable which would prove as valuable an addition to the home garden or market truckman as the rhubarb plant, surely the whole world would know it, and their fortune would be made. Rhubarb is one of the easiest and most easily produced vegetables on the market, says the Rural New Yorker. It has a good sale at remunerative prices from Christmas until about May when it becomes too plentiful in some markets. The summer prices range 75cents to $1 per bushel, while earlier in the season two cents per stalk is a common price. An acre of rhubarb will yield approximately 4000 bushels in year, but to obtain the highest prices of course it must be forced in a greenhouse or cellar. To do this the plant is lifted before the frost comes--about October 1--and placed in good earth, where they have warm temperature, but sunlight is not necessary. A bed may be started by either sowing the seed or planting the roots. It takes a year longer to get started if the seed is sown, and the plants are set with roots. These are set in the ground about two inches deep. The rows are set three feet apart and the plants are set three feet apart in the row. October or November is the best time for planting, but it may also be done in early spring. After planting and when the ground is frozen hard it is all covered with three or four inches deep with coarse stable manure. In the spring the coarse manure is raked off and the finer part is forked or cultivated in between the rows. Very little cultivation is then necessary except to keep the weeds down for a short time, when the large leaves practically cover the ground which keeps the weeds from growing. A bed started in October will yield a small crop the first year and a full crop the second. At the end of the second year the plants can be used for forcing, but they should only be used for this purpose once in three years. This can be done by using only a part each year. Rhubarb, or pie plant, as it is sometimes called, is valuable as both a food and a medicine. When canned for winter use it keeps perfectly and is always relished.
